FOR PETTY GRAFT

The People Pay More Than Half a Million Yearly

To Men Elected to Represent Them in Congress.

FOUR GLARING ABUSES NOTED

Mileage, Clerk Hire, Telegraph Frank and Stationery.

From Each of These Congressmen Get a Rakeoff.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 14.-While party leaders are filling pages of the Congressional Record with economy appeals for home consumption, the congress of the United States is expending more than $500,000 annually in perquisites of the membership in flagrant violation of the spirit of the law. Part of this is carefully hidden away in lump sum appropriations, part is not easily, if at all, separated from necessary expenditures. from necessary expenditures; but above all is thrown an obscurity equaled only by the sacredness with which these perquisites equaled only by the sacredness with which these perquisites are regarded by the beneficiaries of the "system."

The most easily traced of these abuses are four in number, and the "legitimate" graft hung on there mounts up into hundreds of thousands of dollars in the house of representatives alone. Persistent efforts, though weak, to reform these practives have proven as futile as the lament of the disappointed office-seeker. These four are:

The mileage privilege, which, under the old apportionment, amounted last year to $163,500, paid members of the house and senate over and above what these same members allow others for Old Figure Stands. Except in the case of mileage, it is next to impossible to establish with exactitude the amount of unnecessary exactitude the amount of unnecessary expenditure in connection with these "perquisites." And the only means of establishing the fact that members pay themselves just four times as much mileage as they permit the government to pay for any one else, is through their own confession. What this amounts to can be figured up individually. A member of congress

"It will not be contended by any member of the house for a moment, he declared, "that it costs him 20 cents per mile each way to travel from his home to the city of Washington. There isn't a member of the house who cannot travel from his home to Washington the Democrats have instituted several real reforms, and while the system remains in full strength, its operations have been restricted somewhat by the abolishment of a number of useless jobs debate, when the vote came only 58 members were in evidence, the re-

Those who have the figures showing how much each member of the house gets in this way, throw up their hands in holy horror when asked to make public the figures. Although this is public money, appropriated by law from the federal treasury, and paid to public men on the recommendation of a regularly constituted legislative committee, the figures themselves are not for public consumption.

Theorems the figures that the figures themselves are not for public consumption.

Information Hard to Get.

Warren W. Bailey, a Bryan Democrat of Johnstown, Pa., is chairman of the mileage committee of the house. He was asked to give the correspondent of the Topeka State Journal the individual figures. "I have not the authority," replied Mr. Bailey, "Get them from the speaker or the sergeant-at-arms of the house, who pays the mileage allowances. We have given him the figures."

Speaker Clark was next appealed to,

Speaker Clark was next appealed to, with the remark that the newspaper man had been referred to him for the information.

"I have nothing to do with it," re-plied Speaker Clark. "Either Mr. Bai-ley or the sergeant-at-arms can give out the information if they care to." Next the sergeant-at-arms: "Well, I am an administrative officer: I have no authority for giving out such information. You must get it from Mr.

speaker of the house. Upon his third return to Mr. Bailey, the correspondent again was told that it was up to the sergeant-at-arms. So the newspaper man was forced to do his own mileage figuring, which, without knowledge of the routes figured on by the mileage committee, is, of course, unsatisfactory.

The same secrecy surrounds the telegraph account. Upon this there is no limit. A member of congress may send and charge to the United States almost any message he chooses to construe as public business. Aside from the fact that it is next to impossible to define where private political business merges into public business, the privilege frequently is abused by members sending purely personal telegrams, carefully disguised to bring them within the extremely shadowy definition.

Same in Both Houses. When the telegraph companies turn in their bills, the accounts are audited by the sergeant-at-arms, who is supposed to throw out any messages which he does not believe to be public.

posed to throw out any messages which he does not believe to be public. The sergeant-at-arms is elected by the house majority, a creature of the membership of the house. He decides whether the accounts of his superiors shall be approved. Virtually the same practice prevails in the senate.

The account is finally approved and paid by the committee on accounts of the house. Congressman Lloyd of Missouri, chairman of this committee, himself recognizes the abuse, and has introduced a resolution restricting each member to a telegraph account of $40 a year. This was introduced last December and nothing further heard of it. Of course, Mr. Lloyd refuses to give any details of this public business. He will not say how much any member spends. He recently made a compilation, however, from which it was found that between March 4 and June 30, last, house members sent 13,092 telegrams as public business, at a cost of $6,491.34.

Sixteen members, among them Mr. Lloyd, Minority Leader Mann, Congressman Sereno Payne and Majority Leader Underwood, sent no telegrams, except, in the cases of Payne and Underwood, telegrams that concerned the appearance of witnesses before the ways and means committee during the tariff hearings. One hundred and forty-nine members spent less than $5 of government money for telegrams; 144 spent more than $5 and less than $13.50; 96 spent more than $13.50 and less than $40; 20 spent more than $40 and less than $40; 20 spent more than $40 and less than $100; ten members charged more than $100 worth of telegrams in less than four months, and charged more than $100; ten members charged more than $100 worth of telegrams in less than four months, and one member's bill for that period amounted to $212.88. TO GIRDLE THE POLES.

Peary Predicts That Will Be Next Feat of Explorers.

New York, Feb. 14.—The girdling of the poles will be the next feat of explorers. Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary told the members of the Explorers' club, at their annual dinner last night. "There is something which will be worthy of men's best efforts," he said. "It will require a stronger and bigger ship than the Roosevelt."

Mr. Peary said the route he had in mind would be from New York south, to that point where Shackleton will begin his expedition, thence across Polar ice to New Zealand, thence to Sandwich islands, to Bering strait, to the Central Polar basin, to the Atlantic ocean and thence to New York.
